The Department of Child and Family Studies presents a 2-day intensive workshop

Youth Suicide Prevention: A Community Approach

This interactive 2-day workshop will provide opportunities for participants to gain the latest research-based information; engage in experiential exercises; assess and plan a comprehensive, public health approach for suicide prevention; and share ideas and information in large and small group discussions. A follow-up opportunity two months after the workshop will re-connect participants on a group conference call to share community updates and progress of their suicide prevention efforts, discuss any challenges they have encountered in planning and implementation, and be informed of current state and national youth suicide prevention initiatives.

Workshop Goals

Upon completion of the Youth Suicide Prevention: Community-Based Approach Workshop you will:

- Gain knowledge and skill in planning a community approach to youth suicide prevention.
- Enhance your understanding of a suicide prevention, intervention, and postvention framework and resources.
- Work as team or individually to assess your community's readiness and develop strategies for a community approach to youth suicide prevention.
- Understand how a public health approach can be used for community suicide prevention activities.
